Wedding photography is a specialized type of photography that focuses on capturing the events and emotions of a wedding day. Wedding photography is a visual storytelling of a love story. The main goal of wedding photography is to create a collection of high-quality, emotional photographs that will allow the couple to relive this special day of their lives years later. Over time, these photographs become family heirlooms that are passed down to children and grandchildren, strengthening family bonds and identity.

Wedding photography is one of the most difficult and responsible genres, because due to the lack of time, there is no opportunity to shoot a "second take". A wedding photographer must be a reporter, portraitist, psychologist and organizer at the same time. The photographer must prepare in advance, meet with the couple, find out with them what style of photographs they like: classic, reportage, Fine Art, Editorial, Dark & Moody. The photographer must work with the couple to find out in detail the schedule of the day, where the signing will take place, when the wedding will be held and other details. At the same time, it is necessary to know the locations of the events, at what times and where this or that action will take place, what kind of lighting will be there at that time of day. Together with the couple, you should find out the list of family members with whom it is necessary to take a photo, so that later these people are not left out in the photos. During the shooting process, the photographer should not miss various necessary details: rings, dress, shoes, invitation card, bride's bouquet, exchange of rings, first kiss, first dance, cutting the cake and fireworks. The most important and necessary condition for a photographer to work uninterruptedly throughout the day is to have two cameras, in case one breaks down, so that he can continue shooting freely with the second camera. The camera must have two memory slots, in which case images are written to both memory cards simultaneously. It is also necessary to consider the need for wide-angle and portrait lenses to quickly obtain different angles of shooting.
